REMARKS OF PRINCESS AISHA BINT AL HUSSEIN

I, first of all, would like to thank all of you for the honor of being here today. As you know, my background is very much military and this is the first trip that I have had to the United States not representing my country as a Colonel, but coming here to speak about the relationship between Jordan and the United States which has been a very special bond for so many years. In particular, to reaffirm our stand behind the United States against terrorism. I was invited here by a very good friend of mine. A woman I have known for four years, a woman whom I have seen do marvelous work for women in the United States and all of the armed forces, Ms. Vicki McCall. She was the one who invited me to come here and to change my usual role and speak to university and high school students about peace.

Vicki was unfortunately in the Pentagon when it was hit. I immediately called her because I realized how devastating the attacks in the United States were, and particularly for her for having been there. We have bonded over the last few months because of that. Her reaction concerning people here, in particular, young people may not understand that all Muslims and all Arabs do not hate the United States. She thought it was important for someone like me to come out and have the opportunity to speak to people about Islam, about peace, and about people trying to come together and to bridge gaps in understanding each other.

I have had a wonderful time. I have visited a high school. They asked me the toughest questions of the trip so far - bright, young, concerned individuals. It was a wonderful thing for me to see and I am looking forward to the rest of my trip here, as well. I hope when I leave Utah there is a sense, that you do have friends all over the world and that this is very much a global responsibility that good people all over the world come together and try to work to make a safer world for our future generations and our children where terrorism does not exist and this will take all of us working together.

Certainly, Jordan is a friend of the United States. I was educated here in the United States. I have had the opportunity to meet people of all religions, all races, all backgrounds. Unless we all come together and open our hearts to each other, in particular at such a difficult time where there is so much misunderstanding and fear. I do worry about our future. I have two young children with whom I have had a very hard time trying to explain what has been going on in the world in the last year. Particularly in my part of the world where we have been exposed to terrorism throughout our history, starting with my great-grandfather who was assassinated for his want and drive for peace in the Middle East and certainly for this wonderful family that I am so proud to be apart of has dedicated their lives to peace in our region. My late father worked up until the last minute of his life for peace. And a new generation, my brother the King of Jordan, has the same goals and the same determinations to see my late father's dreams through.

I thank you all for inviting me here today. I thank you all for giving me your time today. I have had a wonderful experience and I would also quickly like to congratulate you on the wonderful Olympics that you held here. I know that everybody that came here will go back to their own countries with the same feeling of warmth and friendship that I have been afforded while I have been here. Congratulations and thank you very much.
